Solución:

Sport is an excellent way to improve our health and lift up our attitude. It doesn't matter if it is team sports or individual sports. However, there are people who prefer only one of them.

On the one hand, a benefit of team sports is that you have to learn how to do teamwork. Furthermore, it is not only you who can make a great achievement, you must support other people in order to make the best team. However, there are people who perform better in individual sports. They love being on their own and decide where and when they can practice.

On the other hand, team sports involve discipline and pressure because a good result depends on the whole team being their best. In the case of individual sports, it should be noted that they have a higher competitive level, which can make a person obsessed with being the "best".

To sum up, it is necessary to say that choosing between this sports depends much on the personality and the condition of people.
